They also seem to have an idea that the editor will not charge anything to print long communications on subjects which do not interest the public in general. But we beg to contradict that impression. Country editors have to live by their business and it is as legitimate for them to charge for the use of their space as it is for the bankers to charge for the use of the money he lends, or the merchant to require a profit on the goods he sells. So far as the editor having a surplus of funds on hand is concerned, let us free your minds of that erroneous idea. Country editors don't. For as soon as they get a surplus of funds they cease to be editors. They are capitalists. So when the editor asks for that which is due him (often long past due) don't say to yourself: "He is only doing it to have a little fun." If you think it is fun to edit a country paper and be criticized on all sides for sins of omission and commission, just try it awhile. But pay up before you go into the business for you may never be able to afterward.

LAST DAY OF THE FAIR.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL MEETING EVER HELD.

Large Crowd in Attendance—Awards in the Arena—The Rain Makes the Races Rather Dull.

Saturday closed one of the most successful fairs ever held at Mayville. Larger crowds were present than at any previous fair, notwithstanding the scarcity of money and the World's Fair. Better racing and more orderly crowds were never seen on the grounds. There were but few drunken men and no fights and killings, as have occurred at almost every other fair throughout the state this season. The management were earnest and allowed nothing to lag to make the meeting a pleasant and successful one, and they are to be congratulated upon their achievements. Should another fair be held next year, and the same liberal premiums, purses and stakes offered as there were this year, there is no reason why it should not be equally as successful as the one just closed. To this liberality, in a great measure, is due the magnificent show of fine stock in the arena and the unusually large number of entries in the races, which are the foremost features of a Kentucky fair.

The following awards were made in the arena:

Roadster gelding, four years old and over; W. W. Baldwin, Mason county.
Roadster gelding, three years old and under four; W. W. Baldwin, Mason county.
Roadster gelding, two years old and under three; J. J. Bennett, Ripley, O.
Roadster mare, four years old and over; H. S. Schultz, Lexington.
Roadster mare, three years old and under four; R. C. Kirk, Mason county.
Roadster mare, two years old and under three; H. S. Schultz, Lexington.
Saddle horse, mare or gelding; J. F. Walton, Germantown.
Phaeton pony, 15 hands or under; D. Hech-Inner, Mayville.
Park horse, mare or gelding; N. H. Rowland, Lexington.
Model horse, mare or gelding; N. H. Rowland, Lexington.

Saturday's races were not what they should have been on account of the heavy shower about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, which made the track very muddy and heavy. Following are the summaries of the races:

MUST GO WITH HIS SHIP.

British Naval Captains Bound By An Iron Though Unwritten Law.

The action of Vice Admiral Tyron in refusing to leave the bridge of the Victoria while there was a chance being compared by military men of this city with the action of Brigadier General George A. Custer at the Big Horn massacre. According to now generally accepted facts, an opportunity was offered Custer by a Government Indian scout to cut his way out. Custer refused the proffered Brule blanket and head-dress, and remained to die with his men. Instances are many in the British navy of Captains of war ships preferring to go down with their ships in preference to outliving them. It is an old practice in the British navy, and one which, according to The New York Times, practically amounts to a rule, that the Captain who loses a war ship never obtains a second one. The belief among many American officers is that Tyron was fully imbued with the seaman's idea of the duty of a commander, and knowing that hundreds of men were imprisoned below decks, calmly decided to go down with the ship so long as a man aboard had to die as the result of carrying out orders given by him during the maneuvering. At the U. S. Naval Academy a monument in the center of the grounds stands to-day with the name "Herdon" on its face. Herdon was an American naval officer, who, before the war, was engaged while on furlough in the command of a mail steamer plying between New York and the West Indies. The ship was lost in the gulf stream off the Florida coast. She carried a large number of passengers at the time. The majority of the passengers Herdon saw safely placed in the boats. The last boat waited for Herdon to jump in. Instead of availing himself of the opportunity, Herdon ordered the boat to cast off. The ship went down with Herdon, in his naval uniform standing alone and in full view on the bridge.

COFFIN NAILS.

The Number Consumed in the United States in One Year.

The annual report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shows that three billion cigarettes have been made in this country during the fiscal year just ended. This is an average of about fifty to each individual. The growth in the production of cigarettes goes on year by year. A decade ago the number manufactured was far below one billion. Like pretty much everything else that is done in this country, the manufacturing facilities are greatly increased by the adoption of machinery.

Within the past few years some very wonderful machines for making cigarettes have been invented. One pattern will turn them out at an average rate of 275 a minute. The patents on these devices are vastly valuable. One style, which may be well described for the sake of illustration, passes along an endless strip of paper, the width of which is just the length of a cigarette. The tobacco is fed from above into little scales. They drop as soon as they have received the precise quantity required, emptying their contents upon the strip of paper, which is rolled, chopped off with knives and glued neatly, all in an instant of time. Of course, a great many simultaneously, the machine counting them into the packages, which are likewise wrapped around them by mechanical contrivances aided by hands.

The Russians and Turks do not use any machinery for the manufacture of cigarettes, the work all being done by hand. French cigarettes are particularly mild, because the tobacco is steeped in water to make it so.

The details of the manufacture of cigarettes are kept, to a greater or less degree, a secret by the manufacturers, each of whom has his own particular combination of tobaccos. None of the brands on the market are composed of one kind only. The recipe is not divulged outside of the firm. But this is not all. The original mixture is merely a basis for artificial flavoring. To begin with, various essential oils are added.

The list of these includes rose, geranium, vanilla bean, Tanka bean, and licorice root. These ingredients are added after the tobacco has been chopped into shreds in readiness to be rolled into cigarettes. Finally the particular drug chosen, in the shape of liquid solution, is sprayed on the material with an atomizer, while the tobacco is stirred and mixed. The quantity employed is very carefully judged, so many drops being allowed for each cigarette. For obvious reasons I cannot mention all those that are used in the manufacture of cigarettes, but there is no doubt that opium, valerian and cannabis indica are utilized to the largest extent. Each manufacturer may be said to create a special drug habit among those who smoke his brand, so that they are not satisfied with any other.
